Qur'an Semantic Word Domain Concordance. A semantic domain is an area of meaning and the words used to talk about it. A domain is often given a name consisting of a common word in the domain. For instance, English has a domain 'Rain', which includes words such as rain, drizzle, downpour, raindrop, puddle. The term semantic domain was first suggested to me by brother Mustafa who runs https://qurancore.com when I asked him to suggest a term other than Synonyms.

This Concordance work is based on Mutaraadifaat ul Qur'an in Urdu by Abdur Rahman Kilani. The book is basically a book on Semantic Word Domains and it is not right to call the gathered words under a domain as Synonyms. The author himself has highlighted the different shades of meanings of the different words under the topic headings. The usual method used in the book is that the author chooses a topic in Urdu, and then writes the different Arabic Words used in The Qur'an that in his opinion can be covered under that topic.

Initially, it was planned to link to the relevant pages on http://www.quransynonyms.com , but while trying to link the site up, I found that the volunteers were not completely skilled, i.e. they didn't even translate some portions. Moreover, the organizers didn't even bother to check properly before posting the posts online i.e. I saw at least 8 posts where Qur'anic Aayat Words were written in reverse and after seeing this, I dropped the plan of linking it.

I got the Urdu book scanned via an organization in 2012. Regarding its English translation, which was started in 2013, I suggested that its English translation should be sponsored by funding and done by experts, but the organizers decided to go ahead with a group of free volunteers with different skillsets and backgrounds. I respect the intentions of volunteers, and their sacrifices and efforts, but you will notice the difference between volunteers' translation and experts' translation. The volunteers have even accepted their inability to translate some portions, and the organizers didn't even complete those portions. Now don't say, I should have completed the translation, since I can't assign my limited free Islamic time on translation and verification of the English translation. Moreover, the format at this moment is such that if minor editing is attempted, a lot of effort will have to be made on formatting also since the data is not available in original editable format.

I added roots information or verified the roots already suggested in the book and even made changes where required after comparison with the roots already assigned by me in Qur'an Patterns and Roots Concordance. In case of difference between the 2, research was conducted and based on that research, the concluded root was used in both the projects. The roots had to be assigned, to be able to sort the content via roots and in this sorting, a researcher can study a root in all the different topics in detail.

To download other types of Qur'an Concordance PDFs, and on how to use the quick search codes and links, see the guide for provided for using the search codes on:

http://revivearabic.blogspot.com/2015/09/quran-concordance-roots-patterns-letters-synonyms.html

Some of the search codes used in Qur'an Patterns and Roots Concordance have also been used in Qur'an Semantic Word Domain Concordance. So you can learn how to use all the search codes used in this PDF using the same guide provided in the above post.

This project was started in 2014 and completed in 2018. If I had done it full time, it would have completed in 35 days by The Help of ALLAH. But since I had to do it part time and its priority was lower than other projects and Islamic plans, it took about 4 years and about 250 hours in total to complete. If you believe I should be working full time for Islamic Projects, consider my offer to go full time dedicated at:

http://revivearabic.blogspot.com/2016/04/services-offered.html

This work is just a beginning on Qur'an Semantic Word Domain Concordance. Don't go lazy by taking the easy route by considering it as the final work in this field, but only consider it as a starting point for research into The Qur'an using this angle.
